

Connectors

Connectors in English grammar are basically conjunctive words that are used for connecting similar elements present in a sentence. There are different connectors in English that can be used for expressing your thoughts in a better way. Smart use of linkers can omit the requirement of single sentences and help in connecting the sentence in a more logical way.

- The connector 'and' is used to connect words and sentences. It acts as a link between words and phrases that follow each other, involve parallel actions or discourses and is one of the main connectors used for fluent speech.

"We need to prioritize our tasks and avoid unnecessary distractions."

"We need to conduct user research and gather feedback to inform our design decisions."

- The connector 'or' is used to connect situations or ideas that report alternatives in the sentence.

"You can choose to work remotely or come to the office, depending on your preference."

"You cannot delay the task any further, or it will impact the overall timeline."

- The connector 'but' is preferred to explain the correct subject and generally indicates contrast. It usually indicates an unexpected situation after the first sentence. In some cases it is also used to mean excluding.

"The team has limited resources, but we will make the most of what we have."
