3- Make a short presentation about your last project as a software developer. Include the following points:

1. Brief overview of the project.
2. Your role and responsibilities in the project.
3. Challenges faced during the project.
4. Solutions implemented to overcome those challenges.
5. Key achievements or outcomes of the project.
6. Lessons learned from the project.

Practice delivering your presentation like you do during your daily meeting.

4- Discuss the importance of good communication for the success of a team project. Highlight how clear communication fosters collaboration, enhances productivity, and prevents misunderstandings. Provide examples from your own experiences or observations to support your points.

Homework

As important as a good communication is to know how to listen, specially if the other person is from a no native English speaking country. Share your experiences talking with someone that has a strong accent and your strategy to be able to understand it.
