In front of

In front of refers to on object that shows first when we look at two objects.

> " Our boss is going to do a presentation in front of a big audience."
> " I can't see you. My monitor is in front of your face."

Behind

Behind is the opposite of In front of. It means at the back (part) of something.

> " The new server is behind that door"
> " I have a big screen behind my notebook"

Server

Between

Between normally refers to something in the middle of two objects or things (or places).

> "At the office, I sit between John and Kate."
> " In this app design, we can put the image between those two buttons."

Next to / Beside

Next to and Beside mean the same thing. It usually refers to a thing (or person) that is at the side of another thing.

> " The team conduct their daily beside the agile board."
> " This code fits better next to line 10."
